A troop carrier and transport plane radio operator with the 12th Air Force in Africa, Sicily and Italy, Sgt. Sternberg participated in the invasion at Oran, Sicily and Anzio beachhead. His C-47 group was the first to land supplies and troops to the embattled Americans in the forward positions on Anzio.

Miami Beach, Fla.—His last ten missions were the roughest in the opinion of Sgt. Wm. H. Sternberg, Tinley Park, radio operator aboard a C-47 transport who participated in the invasions of North Africa, Sicily and Italy, while flying 95 missions with the 12th Air Force Troop Carrier Command.

"We were just like a sitting duck in a shooting gallery," exclaimed the Tinley Park airman, now a patient at the AAF Regional and Convalescent Hospital, Miami Beach, Fla. district where he is recovering from a back injury. "Each time we hit the beach head from our bases in Sicily," continued Sgt. Sternberg. "We were in for a real rough time. The Germans had plenty of fighter planes in the neighborhood and how our unarmed C-47 evaded the Nazis is something we shall never know. Luck seemed to be with us always."

"Soon after dropping supplies to the boys right up at the front on one mission, our co-pilot spotted a bunch of Jerries in the distance. They spotted us too, and just about the time they got us in their gun range we flew into the protective covering of a long cloud bank and escaped with only a few bullet holes in our tail."

RETURN TO OLD SCHOOL SITE ISSUE IN GOUGAR SCHOOL ELECTION

A red hot fight is being waged in the Gougar school district west of New Lenox for removing the school from the Barr building back into the old site of the school. The contention is that it is more expensive to operate the school in the Barr building than it was in the old building.

Another point of contention is that the present school site is far more dangerous being located on two paved highways whereas the old school building was located on a gravel road.

In order to have the school placed back in the old site it is necessary to have the majority of the school directors of School Dist. 123 favoring such a move and this will be the issue this Saturday when 2 school directors are to be elected. The campaign now being waged is to elect candidates favoring the proposed move.

The commendation, one of the first to be received by a Negro unit in the Pacific theatre, came from Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commanding general, Army Air Forces, Pacific Ocean areas, who since has been reported missing in the Pacific.

The commendation reads in part: "The work of this battalion as displayed in the completion of a difficult task in a short period of time is outstanding, particularly so in view of the fact that in no way was the quality of their work sacrificed to accelerate construction."

RETURN OF QUESTIONNAIRES INDICATES NEW LENOX LOCKER PLANT MAY SUCCEED

The local committee sponsoring the locker plant in New Lenox, reports that early returns of questionnaires indicate the project has an excellent chance for success, as more than sufficient applications have been received to justify construction. However, the percentage of returns from farmers is lower than is required for necessary approval by WPB.

Before submitting the applications for permission to construct the plant, it is necessary that 60 percent of the applicants be farmers in order to begin construction at the earliest possible date. It is extremely urgent that farmers who have not yet returned their questionnaires do so with the least possible delay.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS OF ST. JOHN'S, MOKENA ENJOYS OUTING

Geuther, visited "China Town" which is the third largest Chinese settlement in the country and where the shops are veritable museums of Chinese products. From there the group went to visit the picturesque Maxwell Street market where wares are displayed on sidewalk and street. This outdoor bazaar, quiet on Saturday, the Hebrew Sabbath, teems with goods and salesmen every other day, particularly Sunday.

Leaving there the girls went to the Chicago Historical Society to view exhibits of the tools, weapons, and clothing of America's Statesmen and soldiers and explorers from the time of Columbus to the present. The Life of Lincoln in miniature was a highlight of this trip. The rest of the afternoon was spent in the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson Park. Donna Bueschel, Phyllis Howes, Shirley Lorenz, Ruth Shevlin, Helen Ried, Mildred Fair, Jean Keuch, Neva Schifler and Donna Williams of the class attended. Betty Fair and Corinne Marti were guests.

LOOSES 3 FINGERS IN CORN SHREDDER ACCIDENT

Herman Kuse, 23, was a Silver Cross hospital Saturday morning following an accident at his farm home south of Frankfort, where his right hand was caught in a corn shredder. The three middle fingers were amputated.

IT MUST be understood in advance that it is the minor leagues and the colleges that make the major leagues what they are. And you can include the sand lots, who furnish their full supply of stars. The big leagues stand and wait.

But, it is the case of Lou Novikoff, recently turned back by the Chicago Cubs, that proves again the number of brilliant minor league stars who can shine in their own domain, but are only dim candlelights in the wind when they move into faster company.

Lou Novikoff is no outstanding exception. He is merely one of many. For example, I recall from my earlier years the case of Three-Finger Jack Hulseman of Shreveport, who could hit .380 in the Southern league, lead that circuit more than once, and yet finished around .190 in the majors. And Hulseman was a great hitter—but only in the minors.

A day or two ago I had a fan session with Lt. Bill Dickey, late of the Yankees, and Duster Mails, one of the best pitchers of his day—20 some odd years ago.

"I could name you 30," the Duster said. "Do you recall Paul Strand? Paul hit over .400 with Salt Lake. What a hitter. Paul was a .400 minor league hitter. But a .200 big league hitter."

"I'll give you another. Do you remember Ike Boone, the Alabama football and baseball star? There was a great football and baseball player. Ike came to the Missions on the west coast in a tough league with a bad right arm. He really had only one arm he could use."

A Flop in Big Time

"But in his first 27 games that season, Ike batted .410. He was terrific. We all said that with two good arms he'd hit .500. He was big, game, strong, a natural athlete and a natural hitter. But in the big leagues with at least one or two clubs he was a steady .240 hitter."

"And there was Smeed Jolley with the Red Sox—6 feet 3—235 pounds, one of the greatest minor league hitters I ever saw. He had everything. In the big leagues he hit maybe .200."

"There was Bevo LeBourveau of the Phillies and Giants—terrific in the minors—but a flop in the big time. I could name you 20 great minor league hitters who couldn't hit the size of their hats in the majors. And this includes the great Russian—Novikoff—who can hit everything in the minors and nothing in the majors."

"One trouble with the minors," Dickey said, "is this—the pitchers or the catchers often fail to discover the batters' weakness. We'll take Lou Novikoff. He can murder a certain type of pitch. He can't even foul a fast one inside. But don't ever give him a fast one outside. He'll murder it. At least that's what I hear. All I know is that after being with the Yankees in the American league so many years, I know just about what every fellow likes to swing at—and also what he DOESN'T like to swing at. And what a difference that makes."

(As a side remark, I'd like to add that Bill Dickey knew more about American league hitters than any catcher in the history of baseball. He knew everything they liked—and everything they didn't like.)

Greatest Hitter

"There was one exception. His name is Ted Williams of the Red Sox."

"There is the greatest hitter I ever saw," Dickey went on. He'd never swing at a ball two inches off the plate. Williams could wait for a fast ball or a fast curve until it was almost in his glove. Then if he liked it he'd even hook it to left.

"Ted had the swiftest reactions I've ever seen. He could make up his mind what to do in at least a tenth of a second. I tried to cross him every way I knew, but I never could. I'll say that Ted Williams is the greatest hitter I ever saw in baseball, and I know how good Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe Di Maggio were. But Williams was something out of this world. If we hadn't run into this war I believe Williams would have finished as the greatest hitter of all time."

It might be added here that Lt. Bill Dickey, the Arkansas quail shot, never makes any wild statements. He only calls them as he sees them. Nothing else counts with him.

Most Thrilling Fight

When it comes to the most thrilling prize fight, I always pick the Dempsey - Firpo volcanic eruption that lasted only a trifle more than four minutes. Where Dempsey was hammered to the floor or at least to his knees with Firpo's first right-hand—where Dempsey kept Firpo on the floor most of the round—where Firpo hammered Dempsey through the ropes—where everything happened in such a hurry that no one could follow the swiftly shifting scenario of raw action.

Your 1945 Garden Good Practices Produce Better Paying Yields

EVERY Victory garden should be tailored individually to the family it is expected to feed and to the space available for gardening.

In planning the 1945 garden every gardener will do well if he looks over the experience of the past year or two and tries to meet more nearly the appetites and food preferences of his own family. If any crop went to waste because the family did not care for the product, it is good gardening to omit it entirely in this year's planting or to cut it down to what the family will use. Use the space saved to grow something that is in demand.

First of all in planning the garden, a plot of land suitable for a town, or even a country garden, must be in the open where it can get direct sunlight at least six hours a day with no obstructing trees or buildings.

The plot must be well drained. A rich, deep sandy loam free from debris is the best all-purpose garden soil, but such an ideal is rarely found. Unless a soil is of such character that it can be spaded in the spring into a loose crumbly condition, it will be difficult to work, if not definitely unsuited, to vegetable growing. Land that is nearly level is best because it is easier to work and is less likely to be damaged through washing by heavy rains.

Convenience of the garden location is more important than might be supposed. It should be as close to the home as a suitable place can be found because the garden needs some attention almost every day. Even when it is too wet to plant or cultivate, the gardener should see it every day or two so as to follow all developments and know in advance what work needs to be done. Timeliness is a surprisingly large element in a successful garden.

There is no one "right" way to arrange or plan a home garden. The gardener is urged to consider his own needs, the climate of his locality and his own particular garden spot in planning and arranging his garden. Conditions and details of methods of growing plants differ so widely over the country that it is impossible to give a uniform plan of growing vegetables that would fit all sections of the country.

A garden much longer than it is wide is generally more convenient to work. It matters little whether the rows run north or south, east or west, but on a sloping area it is important that the rows run across the slope, not up and down, so that rainfall may be held on or in the soil, instead of running down the sloping rows, carrying away the soil.

Plan Garden To Suit Needs

The most successful gardener plans his garden well in advance. A good sized sketch or map of the plot should be drawn, preferably to scale, so that the time and space each crop will occupy can be set down. Particular attention should be made to replanting. For instance after harvesting beans, turnips, beets, carrots should be sown. The idea is to keep the ground constantly producing until frost.

Most gardeners are prone to plant too much of early crops with the result that some are wasted. A succession of varieties or of plantings will give a much longer period of harvest from the same total amount planted.

Particular care should be taken that tall growing crops like corn or tomatoes will not shade the smaller crops, such as beets or radishes. Then perennial plants, such as asparagus, rhubarb and various savory herbs, should be kept together at one side of the garden where they can be conveniently handled without interfering with the portion to be plowed or spaded each year.

Where there is any great variation in the composition of the soil in different parts of the garden, it will be advisable to take this into consideration.

If a part of the land is low and moist, such crops as celery, onions, and late cucumbers should be placed there. If part of the soil is high, warm and dry, there is the proper location for early crops and those that need quick, warm soil. Permanent crops, such as asparagus, should be located where they would not interfere with regular cultivation.

New Chemical Aids Farm Production

Many Weed Control Problems Answered

REPORTS of excellent results in killing weeds in grass plots, lawns and pastures, without damaging the grasses, promises important new uses of a compound called 2-4 dichlorophenoxyacetic acid (2-4-D for short.)

Water sprays containing this compound in specified solutions killed heavy stands of dandelion and narrow-leaf plantain without injury to the grass.

Experiments with lawn pennywort in areas of turf that were heavily infested with the weed, resulted in destruction by 2-4-D acid of heavy stands of turf pest without accompanying injury to the established grass. New grass seedlings coming from seed planted several weeks after the chemical treatment were not affected. Repeated applications were found necessary to kill out noxious plants that came up later from weed seeds that were not caught by the first spray.

Other weeds readily killed by the compound, according to a government report, included chickweed, pigweed, wood sorrel, knotweed and broadleaf dock.

Well established blue grass was not injured by the potent new herbicide. The creeping bent grasses were found much less resistant to it but resistant enough to permit the killing of susceptible weeds without being destroyed themselves.

The 2-4-D acid's effect on susceptible weeds and clover is much different from that of other chemical herbicides. Instead of producing a local burning effect, and destroying only a part of the plant, it spreads and kills the entire plant, roots and all.

'COW OF CHINA'

Recorded in history since 2838 B. C., soybeans have come into their own as a leading American farm crop. For centuries the Buddhist monks have lived chiefly on soybean cheese—to day we are literally fighting a war with soybeans. Soybeans are one of the few food products in which the protein content is improved by cooking.

Among the food uses of soybeans and soybean oil are shortening, margarine, salad dressing, bakery goods, ice cream, macaroni, flour, soy milk, bean curd, soy sauce, diabetic foods, sausage filler, candy and meat substitutes.

The industrial uses include paints, varnishes, enamels, linoleum, oil-cloth, fabrics, protective coating material, lecithin for mineral oil, soaps, etc., rubber substitute, printing ink, adhesives, plastics, leather tanner, medicine, synthetic wool, bee food, beer element and as food for livestock and poultry.

Distillers' Grains

High in vitamin B complex, distillers' dried grains, available in most localities, can be profitably included in the wartime poultry ration.

Recent experiments at Purdue have proved that the distillers' dried solubles are capable of entirely replacing milk in the ration of growing chicks. Six pounds of the solubles will take the place of five pounds of dried milk. While they will not furnish all the animal nutrition needed, they are an excellent addition to the chick's ration.

Reinforce your heavy bath towels along each side with a binding of one-inch tape. Strengthens them for the hard pulling men and boys give them rubbing hard after shower baths.

A bit of elastic will ease the strain on slip straps. Salvage bits from discarded garments and sew to the strap just where it fastens at back. Straps that give easily are less likely to pull holes in the lace at the top of the slip.

The Golden Text was, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved; for thou art my praise" (Jer. 17: 14).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. . . . These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, . . . as ye go, preach, saying, The Kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give" (Matt. 10: 1, 5, 7, 8).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus established in the Christian era the precedent for all Christians are under as direct orders now, as they were then, to be Christlike, to possess the Christ-spirit, to follow the Christ-example, and to heal the sick as well as the sinning. . . . The Christian Science has enlisted to lessen evil, disease, and death; and he will overcome them by understanding their nothingness and the allness of God, or good. Sickness to him is no less a temptation than is sin, and he heals them both by understanding God's power over them. The Christian Scientist knows that they are errors of belief, which Truth can and will destroy" (pp. 138,450).

Staff Sgt. Henry A. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith of Wilmington, is a member of the 386th Bombardment group commanded by Col. Thomas G. Corbin, of Fremont, N. C. which has played an outstanding role in whittling down Nazi occupied territory. "The Crusaders" have been overseas more than 21 months and have been continually blasting away at enemy installations of all types. The targets have included communication centers, railway bridges, railway marshalling yards, robot bomb sites and now in Germany proper, fortified villages. Corbin's Crusaders got "Hank" as a gunner last September and since then he has been living up to the high standards of the group's airmen. His buddies call him one of the most serious, hard working gunners in the group. Having flown more than 15 missions against the Germans, he has many experiences in the air, but there is one that made the biggest impression.

"We were out to bomb an ordnance depot," he relates, "near Unna in the Ruhr valley. Our job was to cover the area with incendiaries. We managed to do it up right, in spite of the flak that followed us and stuck with us thruout the bombing run. I saw the depot blanketed with unusually bright glares and a bit later with curling white smoke. The Jerries must have been pretty mad at us that day for they poured on the flak, even after we'd dropped the bombs into them." In moments when Smith isn't flying or cleaning his guns or learning something new about flying, he spends most of his time admiring the many snapshots he carries of his wife, the former Miss Lois Jean Frazer and their 18 month old daughter Barbara Jean Smith.

So This Is London

The World Trip Begins
By Congressman Everett M. Dirksen
16th Illinois district

The author of this column is writing this issue from the Dorchester Hotel in the North End of London. He hopes that censorship and the course of the mails will permit the occasional reports at different points on the trip. So, a word about the journey. From Washington to Montreal is 681 miles by train. There we took off for Scotland. It was a non-stop flight for 10 1-2 hours over a distance of 2749 miles. The flight was made at 21,000 feet. It is as smooth as velvet. We rode above all weather. However, to have an oxygen mask over the face for 9 hours is something of a chore. Strange that one can even snooze with such a mask over his mouth. Normally, the journey is made at 10,000 feet and oxygen is not needed. Another 2 1-2 hours by plane and we were in London.

SO THIS IS LONDON

I was here last in June of 1919. It has changed very little. Same streets, parks, stores and shops. There's a word for London. It's "tidy". There has been enormous bomb damage but the casual visitor would never know it unless he specifically took an inspection tour to see. Worst damage was in Lambeth, Chelsea and other areas. The rubble and debris has been scooped up and hauled away in barges on the Thames River. Bombs fell on the incomparable St. Paul's Cathedral and also Westminster Abbey. But the damage was comparatively slight. Many people firmly believe that these historic places were saved by the interposition of Providence. This belief, this faith, has been a tonic for morale. Thousands of buildings are destroyed. Thousands of people have been killed. Yet it is hard to picture because the debris has been removed. The amazing thing is not the physical damage but the resilient courage of a people who took it day after day sleeping fitfully in stuffy brick or concrete shelter at night, working day after day, and keeping the Vigil of Victory with a steady faith. It proves the truth of Confucius' observation that nothing is so enduring as human will power.

It's Still Dark

But London is still dimmed out. Street lights are hooded to prevent glare. Buses and Taxis drive with dim lights. There are no electric signs. At 7:00 pm. the blackout curtains on all windows are drawn. Movies close at 10:00 pm. Bars are open from 7:00 to 9:00 pm. There is an astonishingly good nature about it all. For five years, they've gone thru this blackout. That's more than 1800 days. And somehow they seem like the hotel maid, who, when she heard a bomb whistle in its flight opened a window. The occupant of the room was alarmed. "Good Heavens," she said, "close the window, quickly. Aren't you afraid?" The maid looked at the guest in a most casual way and said, "No indeed, since we're paying for this war, I like to see what we're getting for it." That's a fair illustration of the serenity and calm with which this city has come thru. Where window glass has been knocked out by bombs, composition or beaver board has been installed. On it are posted stickers reading, "Business As Usual." Truly, except for shortages and some inconveniences, business is as usual in London.

ARE WE READY FOR COMMUNISM

In a recent editorial, the Kansas City Times said that a glance at the record of the Farm Security Administration will explain much of the Congressional distrust of the methods and dreams that have been embraced in its operations.

Questionable practices indulged in by the FSA have been made public by a House Committee made up of four Democrats and three Republicans. The Committee's findings were unanimous and show practices that are almost unbelievable. Paragraphs quoted in the Times show that "the FSA was financing communistic re-

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

I see where in 1944 our drinking bill was 7 billion. Pardon, that is quite a few swigs. And on top of that, there was a whiskey shortage. The distilleries in this country only run a few weeks, so several foreign nations profited by sending us slathers of rum, and tequila and Scotch and vodka. The way it turned out, we had just as well allowed our own distilleries to make the stuff and make some money and pay more taxes versus sending the profits out of the country.

But this is not a lecture on drinking or vice versa. It is an inquiry into why we must have Govt. Economists. Govt. Economists claim that income taxes are too low if we can afford to buy 7 billion in highballs. These Boys with the furrowed brows jump at the conclusion that every body drinks, even-Stephen, man, woman and child, so tax 'em all equal via income tax, while actually our drinking is done by only a sixth or less of our population. Instead of taxing the hooch drinkers more, they say boost the income taxes on the tea and lemonade and coffee drinkers.

Anybody having a good idea on why we need a flock of Govt. Economists on our payroll, please wire me but do not do so collect.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA

USO New Lenox Chapter:

Dear Friends:

This is to thank you for the Xmas box I received. And was it good. I opened it up and while I was reading your beautiful Christmas card, Presto, the candy was all gone. I at least received a little piece of it. My men were sure selfish with it. I certainly was glad that you folks made these men happy and were they happy. Their thanks to you folks for the candy you sent me. They won't forget that candy and won't forget you folks there. So I also send my thanks for it also.

Stephen Sitar, Lt.

Dear Friends:
I have received both the Christmas and Birthday packages you so kindly sent me. Thanks alot. I and my buddies are enjoying the candy a lot. It makes me feel good to know that my friends have not forgotten us so far from home. I hope we can all be home before another holiday comes around. Holidays are always the worst days to spend away from home, they sure make us homesick. It also means more work for me with a larger dinner to prepare but that helps us to keep from thinking too strongly. We had quite a bit of entertainment at our post with movies and band concerts and G. I. shows. Something almost every other nite. Well, thanks again and I hope we meet again soon. Best regards to all with best wishes for the New Year.

Dear Friends:
I received the candy on Christmas day and like all good things it didn't last long. Hours later, boys were still coming in asking whether or not I had just a tiny piece of that good home made fudge left. The boys and myself sure appreciated it a whole lot. Good candy is really rare out here. We have had quite a change out here from deep mud to deep snow. But it is much better this way. No need to wash our clothes each day, the snow just brushes off. Everything else is OK. Thanks very much for remembering me, and wishing you

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"When this war is all over, Judge, there will be some mighty interesting books written about it. Expect we'll learn a lot of things we didn't know before."

"Yes, Fred, when the record is finally written we'll realize what a gigantic operation this war really was and how important to final victory many factors really were."

"Take, for example, just one industry. Few people realize the importance of the great work done by the beverage distillers during the war. A high government official called it 'an almost unparalleled example of the overnight conversion of an entire industry from peace to war.' He also said not so many months ago, while speaking about synthetic rubber, 'It is fair to regard the rubber manufactured to date as being almost solely the product of the beverage distilling industry.' That's the type of thing I have in mind... the way great American industries at home cooperated to help our brave fighting men abroad."

"I see what you mean, Judge... a complete history of American teamwork."

The 5,400-horsepower Diesel freight locomotives of the ROCK ISLAND LINES pull 125 loaded freight cars—approximately 6,400 tons—at a speed of 70 miles per hour!

This is but one example of what ROCK ISLAND, one of America's railroads, is doing to establish outstanding performance records in the handling of war traffic... records never dreamed of, let alone approached, in the past.

We are proud that the progress we planned yesterday made us ready for today's big job... ready to perform a vital service in this war emergency. The Program of Planned Progress of the ROCK ISLAND LINES has been, and is, a continuing effort. It has held the railroad in a position of leadership and promises even greater development in future years.

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow, ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

WORLD'S FIRST ALUMINUM BOX CARS!

Aluminum box cars are now in service on the ROCK ISLAND LINES. They are made of the same special high tensile aluminum alloy used in B-29 Bombers! "Dead weight" is reduced as much as 4½ tons per car. A train of 125 aluminum cars would reduce the weight of the train 562½ tons, with no reduction in the load carried. Another step in better railroading!

Dear Ladies:

Received your Birthday card and the money order the other day, finally found time to answer it now, thanks a lot.

The weather here has been pretty good for the last month, hardly any rain at all, I sure hope it stays this way.

How is everything coming along back there, good I hope. I sure wish I was back home now but so does everybody who is in the service.

Has the town grown any since I left or did it get smaller with all the guys they took out of it.

Well I can't think of anything else to write so I'll close for now. Thanks again for the money, it sure came in handy. Keep up the good work ladies.

Sincerely,

DREW PEARSON

MacARTHUR-KIRK DUEL

WASHINGTON.—In a highly secret session before the senate military affairs committee last Thursday, Gen. George Marshall, army chief of staff, refused to guess when the end of the war with Germany will come. According to all logic, he said, the German resistance should be at an end now, but there is no sign that the army is collapsing. The Gestapo still retains its hold of terror on Germany.

Marshall pointed out that German gasoline stocks are practically dried up, and that the Nazis do not have enough fuel to move their supplies, let alone their armored vehicles and artillery. On the other hand, he said, their supply problem is far simpler than ours because they are fighting at home. Their repair and replacement job for tanks and other vehicles is also comparatively simple. When Allied armor is knocked out, it means that it is lost if the damage is too much for the field repair bases, while a Nazi tank which has suffered far more serious damage can be taken right into a tank factory not so many miles from where it was hit. This is a tremendous advantage, he said.

The chief of staff also told the senators that it is a mistake to figure that the Japs will fold up quickly once Germany is out of the war. Although its losses have been heavy, Japan still has a formidable army and vast stores of supplies. He would not estimate the length of time needed to defeat the island empire. But he insisted it would be extremely tough going.

Marshall said nothing during this session about his plan to take over as supreme commander in the Pacific once Germany falls, but members of the committee now take that for granted.

Explanation?

General MacArthur's army friends in Washington have a unique explanation for his refusal to let Maj. Gen. Norman Kirk, surgeon general of the army, visit Manila on his recent inspection tour. They say privately that no suitable housing was available for General Kirk. One MacArthur supporter, who is familiar with the Kirk incident, added, "When you are a five-star general, you don't have to give an explanation for what you do."

Further details of General MacArthur's refusal to let General Kirk touch foot even on the Island of Luzon in order to inspect army hospitals there have now leaked out. Kirk, as head of the army medical corps, arrived in Leyte with a staff of medical experts ready to place them in strategic positions in Luzon where fighting was heavy at that time.

As a courtesy to MacArthur, Kirk radioed him from Leyte island that he was coming. He received in reply a message saying that his presence was not needed.

Scarcely believing his eyes, General Kirk gave MacArthur a chance to change his mind by sending another telegram which said in substance: "Don't understand your message. Do you mean by your telegram number so-and-so that my assistance is not welcome?"

General MacArthur's reply was brief and to the point. It read: "No, repeat no."

Kirk then got in his plane, boiling mad, and came home.

Note—The war department for some time has been split into the pro-MacArthur and the anti-MacArthur schools. Many of the general's own contemporaries don't like him, feel that he has never given sufficient credit to men who bore the brunt of the Pacific fighting such as General Krueger, Eichelberger, Kenney, Arnold and others. They also resent the fact that news dispatches from the Pacific must bear the date-line "General MacArthur's headquarters," and point out that in contrast Eisenhower requires no such date line and has given much credit to Generals Patton, Hodges, Simpson, Patch, and Devers, all of whom are well known to the public, whereas few know the names of the generals commanding MacArthur's armies.

Here is one story as to how American troops managed to capture the important Ludendorf bridge across the Rhine. A group of anti-Nazi students are reported to have been quietly organizing in the Rhine valley, and secretly joined Hitler's Elite guard, the "Schutz staffel" in 1942 where they have been boring from within ever since. It was this group that is reported to have tipped off the American command that the Remagen bridge would be intact.

EUROPEAN DEATH TOLL

One thing Joseph Stalin pointed out to Roosevelt and Churchill that greatly impressed them at Yalta was the terrific toll the Nazis had exacted from the people of Europe. One-seventh of Poland's population has been destroyed by the Nazis, Stalin said a preliminary investigation disclosed.

Stalin also pointed out that Hitler had won a tremendous victory over the Allies by permanently frustrating the birth of some 10,000,000 in conquered countries.

PIONEERS OF FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 12:1, 2; Acts 7:4-7, 12-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—By faith Abraham, when he was called, obeyed . . . and he went out, not knowing whither he went.—Hebrews 11:8

Bible history is a story of men of faith called and used of God to carry out His purpose in the world. These thrilling accounts of worthwhile lives are to be our special concern during the three months we study the history of Israel and of the Church.

I. A Call and a Covenant (Gen. 12:1, 2).

God was now ready to make known His choice of a man to be the father of His chosen people. He went down into Ur of the Chaldees in the midst of heathen worship, and called out a man who had faith in the true God.

Abram, "when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went" (Heb. 11:8).

The Lord called him out from his own land and kindred, to get him away from his heathen forebears and their worship. God wants separated believers in our day, too (read and ponder II Cor. 6:17, 18). That call comes to every believer. To those who are to serve Him, there is a definite call much like Abram's (see Matt. 10:37-39).

With the call came a great covenant, a seven-fold promise given in Genesis 12:2, 3. That covenant God repeatedly renewed with Abraham and his descendants. It has been partially fulfilled, and God has put Himself on record that every bit of it shall be completed. He keeps His promises.

Why did God choose Israel? It was an act of His sovereign grace, not based on their merit or goodness. He had a threefold purpose: (1) That they should be the repository for His truth (the Old Testament) in the earth; (2) that they should be the channel for the coming of the personal Redeemer to the earth; (3) that they should be a national witness to the one true God amid the nations of the earth.

They accomplished two of these, but failed in the last, and are now under God's judgment for that sin and failure.

II. Obedience and Opportunity (Acts 7:4-7).

Abram went out at God's command, even though he knew that it meant suffering and trial, being obedient without question or hesitation. Bible history reveals that God delights to do mighty things for those who give Him unquestioning obedience.

God did great things for Abraham, and yet he did not live to see the fulfillment of the promise. He knew it was to be so, realizing that God's plan was to be carried out in the children which he did not yet have (see Heb. 11:9-11).

Here is a lesson for us. Our faith today, and the measure in which we apprehend the grace of God for life and service, will bless not only us, but our children (Ps. 103:17). For their sakes we ought to seek to increase the spiritual heritage of our families. Certainly we should do nothing to blight their lives (Exod. 34:7).

One may not be able to boast of the greatness and fineness of one's ancestors, but one can be determined by the grace of God to be a good ancestor.

Observe that Abraham's obedience opened up the whole history of blessing and usefulness to the entire nation of Israel, a history not yet concluded by any means. Think what opportunity he might have destroyed by disobedience.

III. A Family and Its Faith (Acts 7:12-17).

Stephen, a portion of whose address of defense before the council is here before us, reviews the history of God's dealings with Israel. Tracing the line down through Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph, he recalls how God provided a haven of plenty for them in Egypt until they were ready to be brought up into the possession of their inheritance—the land of Palestine.

Lack of space forbids the review of the lives of these pioneers of faith. The study would be most illuminating, for it repeatedly throws into sharp contrast the awful failures of these men when they forgot God, and the mighty victories they gained when they believed Him.

In spite of their failures they were essentially men of faith, for God has counted them worthy of a place in that remarkable list of heroes of faith found in Hebrews 11 (see vv. 17-22).

The days in which we live are not pioneer days in the usual sense, but they are days when God is calling for new pioneers of faith to serve Him in a befuddled and bruised world. There are stirring days ahead for the Church of Christ if we as Christians will, like Abraham, hear the call of God and go out in loving obedience to Him.

Proper inflation is a must for maximum tire service; and now we have reports of an ingenious post-war device which, through a series of lights on the car or truck dashboard, will warn the operator when the pressure in any tire is under what it should be.

"Ducks," the amphibious 2½-ton trucks now used by the Army, have tires that originally were designed by B.F. Goodrich for desert use. The tires have broad tread and are exceptionally flexible and light in weight. These desert tires which went to sea are rendering heroic service in the South Pacific and on the European battlefronts.

CHAPTER I

Within the firm walls of flesh that held him prisoner the foal kicked out angrily. He did not want to be born. The violent constrictions of the walls of his house, which came unexpectedly, disturbed his long peaceful growth and put him in a fury, and he unfolded himself and kicked again and again.

He wanted no change. Here was quiet darkness—nothing to prick and tantalize his eyes. Here was security—no possible harm could reach him. Here was food without effort or even knowledge on his part. Here was the softest floating bed to buffer him against shock. Here was warmth that never fluctuated. Here was—in some dim way he felt it—love and protection from his mother's heart. He would not be born.

Twice before he had foiled the labor pains, and his dam had resigned herself and had continued to carry him. (She was the handsome sorrel mare called Flicka, belonging to young Ken McLaughlin of the Goose Bar ranch.) She had stood patiently, not moving much, up in the stable pasture just beyond the corrals. And it had become the habit of everyone at the ranch, Rob and Nell McLaughlin, and their two boys Howard and Ken, and Gus and Tim, the hired hands, to walk out to see her every day, to note how patiently she stood, getting larger and larger, her bright and lively nature changed to somber brooding. If anyone went near her headquarters she kicked at them.

Visitors to the ranch went out to inspect her too. One said to Nell McLaughlin, "That's the hugest mare I ever saw."

"She's not so huge," said Nell. "It's just that she's carrying a colt that should have been born in the spring, and here it is, nearly time for the boys to go back to Laramie to school, and still she hasn't foaled."

They all agreed that now and then such things happened to mares and everyone could tell of a case. There was much curiosity as to what the colt would be like. He surely ought to be a good one, big and strong and well developed.

The laboring mare lay down on the ground. The foal, impose his will as he might, was helpless. The violent surges continued, coming at regular intervals, and he was being turned this way and that as if by intelligent hands, until he took the position of a diver, front hoofs stretched out and his little muzzle resting on them. Then he felt pain for the first time and would have struggled and kicked if he could have, but he was held in a vise and could not move. Pressure was strong against him on all sides. There was the sensation of movement through a passage and suddenly a jar as he slid out to the earth.

For a moment he was sheltered from the air and the light by the envelope of membrane in which he was enclosed; then the mare gained her feet and whirled around and her teeth and tongue stripped him of the membrane and he began to breathe.

From that moment on all that he knew was pain, for the breathing hurt his lungs, and, opening his eyes, they were stabbed by blinding flashes of light. Terror came when his ear drums were hammered upon by crashes of thunder, and he reacted by giving little choking bleats and trying to sit up. Icy rain sluiced upon him. The hard ground upon which he lay was running with water.

His mother licked and licked him. This warmed him and brought the blood to the surface of his body. He yearned to be closer to her and struggled to rise but had not yet the strength.

There was no mercy for him in the skies. It was the collision of several storms that had ridden up from the lowlands to this high peak of the Wyoming Rocky Mountain Divide. Clusters of purple thunderheads struggled mightily, hurling themselves against each other with detonations that shook the ground. Wide bands of intolerable light stabbed from zenith to earth.

But there was mercy for the colt closer by, and he knew it. His feeble struggles to rise became stronger. His mother's licking tongue encouraged him. The yearning to reach the warmth and shelter of her body grew to a passion—he must, must get to her.

And so, long before the storm was over, the foal had found his feet. The teat, hot and swollen, was in his mouth. He was safely anchored; and because of the danger and pain so lately experienced, his awareness was sharpened. Warmth and milk were more than food—they were an ecstasy.

Ken McLaughlin was hunting his mare.

A thin, twelve-year-old boy, with a shock of soft brown hair falling over dark blue eyes that had a shadow as well as a dream in them. He stood looking at the place near the corrals where Flicka should have been and could hardly believe that it was empty, for more than once a day all through this last month since he had stopped riding her he had been out to see whether she had foaled, and she had never been far from her feed box. This afternoon she had been near the spill of fresh water that ran out of the corral trough, but now there was no sign of her.

This meant, Ken knew, that her time had come, and his heart beat a little faster. She had hidden herself away, as all animals will if they are free, to give birth to her foal with no one to witness her labor and pain and victory.

As the boy hesitated there, his eyes scanning the pine woods that edged the pasture, his wits were at work. If he had been Flicka and had wanted to hide, where would he have gone? And immediately he turned to the woods. Those woods, sparse and free of underbrush, covered the rocky shoulder of the stable pasture where it sloped away, north, to the little stream called Deercreek which bounded it. The hill was so precipitous in places that it formed low cliffs overhung with twisted pines. At the base of them were caverns. Ken and Howard knew every foot of these terraced cliffs. They had been there on foot and on horseback. Flicka and Highboy—their saddle horses—knew them too, and had become accustomed to the steep paths down which they must slide on their haunches with the boys clinging to their backs like monkeys; or the scramble up, during which the boys kept from sliding off backwards only by tangling their fists in the horses' manes.

Warmth and milk were more than food. They were an ecstasy.

Flicka might be on any one of those narrow shelves or pockets, or hidden in one of the little dells at the base of a cliff. She knew them all.

Ken darted toward the woods. It had just begun to rain. The boy cast a careless glance at the sky, refused to accept the warning of what he saw there, telling himself that it would be just a shower from which the trees would shelter him, and began his search.

Occasionally he stopped and called her, "Flicka! Flicka!" and then stood listening in that peculiar state of tension which everyone feels when they call and are not answered.

The daylight on those September evenings held until after eight o'clock, but this evening there was a murky gloom, and under some of the trees there were already pockets of darkness into which Ken stared for minutes before being sure that no living thing was there.

The rain pattered like shot on the ground, and presently Ken heard the long familiar roll of drums in the sky. Suddenly a wind was roaring. The mass of dark clouds sank toward the earth, then opened and poured out torrents of rain. Lightning blazed and thunder crashed.

The boy, crossing an open dell, caught the full brunt of it and dove under a projecting, shelf-like rock, which had left a shallow cave beneath. A small cottontail was sitting primly there for shelter. As Ken shot in, the cottontail shot out, and the boy, panting, drew up his knees and clasped them and sat looking at the spectacle of the storm with an expression of exultation on his thin eager face.

Such torrents of water were coming down that presently the earth was covered. Running streams tore between the trees and shot off the cliff-tops. A good-sized rivulet swept under Ken's sheltering rock, and in a moment he was immersed and drenched. He rolled out from under and stood choking and laughing, shaking the water out of his eyes. Then, since he could be no wetter, he decided to ignore the storm and continue his search for Flicka.

Either the wind was getting colder or the rain was turning to hail or snow, for his wet jersey was like ice against his skin as he trotted in and out of the paths and trees. Often in September there were snowstorms on the top of the Divide, and it seemed to him one was coming now. Up here in the high altitude one day it was snowing and the next like summer.

Ken came upon Flicka in a little dell at the foot of a cliff, cut by the narrowest thread of a path. She stood under an over-hanging tree, but even that could do little to protect her against the rain. When he saw the foal beside her, he stood staring. There had never been a white foal born on the Goose Bar Ranch before. He could hardly believe it. There came a dry fullness in his throat. Flicka—Flicka's foal—her first! And not only off color, but white! A throwback! It was a shock to him.

He called her name quietly. She turned her head and he went to her. She looked anxiously at the foal. Ken stood staring down at it in the gathering darkness. White and narrow and with head beaten down by the pouring rain, tilted toward its mother—it looked as though it might fall over any minute.

Flicka gave a little grunting whinny. Ken could understand her talk, and he knew she was cold and miserable and worried about the foal. They should both of them be in the barn, and Flicka should have a good pail of hot mash. He wondered if the foal could follow her up that thread of a path, and coaxed the mare to try the ascent.

She would not move. Ken put his belt around her neck and led her up. The little one, coming after her with wavering steps, struggled but could not follow. Flicka, turning, saw it halted here. She balked. Ken slipped the belt off her neck and she backed down to the foal and licked it.

Somehow the foal must be got up the path. Ken wondered if he could drag or carry it. Often he and Howard, wrestling with the little foals as they trained them (part of the work of their summer vacations) would clasp their arms around them, lift them off the ground. One little fellow Howard had carried all around with its long legs trailing. But this was an unusually big colt—Ken was doubtful.

With his hand on Flicka's neck he sidled toward the foal, speaking soothingly. "There, there, little fellow—wouldn't hurt you—don't be frightened—it's all right, Flicka—wouldn't hurt your baby—you know I wouldn't."

The mare was excited and anxious and the foal, as Ken's hand touched its neck, squealed and tried to struggle away. Ken put both arms around the wet slippery body and held tight, but lifting was a different matter. Still talking to Flicka, who was nickering nervously, Ken exerted all his strength. Suddenly he had a little kicking fighting demon in his arms and the foal bared its four baby teeth and bit his arm.

Ken dropped it. Flicka whirled close and stood protectively over it. Ken, scolding under his breath and holding his forearm that the foal's teeth had pinched, realized that he must get help.

He leaped up the pathway.

Gus and Tim, immediately after the supper dishes had been washed up, had taken the pick-up and driven over to the Saturday night dance in Summerville's barn at Tie Siding. Ken's mother and father had gone in to town to dine with Colonel Harris. There was no one but himself and Howard on the ranch, and the responsibility was his own because Flicka was his mare. Besides—this little foal—this particular foal—at the thought of all that depended on him, Ken's feet flew faster, and his eyes, made keen and knowing by his life on the ranch, gazed at the sky and the clouds, gauging the storm.

The wind was changing, veering around to the east, and, yes—what he had suspected was happening. Every raindrop now had a body to it, a little core of slush—it was changing to snow. It beat on his face and nearly blinded him. The wind changed its tune, it rose to a howl, whipping the branches of the pine trees.

But Ken was not cold. The excitement in him made him hot and swift. He reached the corrals, ran down through the gorge to the house, and burst into the warm kitchen where Howard, who was interested in increasing the size of his muscles, was reading in a droning voice from a "Hercules" pamphlet.

Tinley Servicemen's Letters

March, 1945

Dear Friends:

It has been sometime since I've written you to let you know of my new address. I know the last letter I wrote you was around after Christmas thanking you for the gift box you sent. Well there isn't much to write about or can write at the present, but I'm feeling fine and also hope you all are in the best of health. So will close for now and hope to hear from you in the near future. Regards to all. As ever, Dave Zeilstra.

March 7, 1945

Dear Friends:

I've been receiving the Tinley Times regularly, and want to do so, that is the reason for this request to change my address. I'll be an old timer around the streets of Washington, D. C. pretty soon, inasmuch as I will have lived in all sections except the southwest section now.

My new address is Irene Johnston, Y. 1-c 149 13th St. N.E., Washington 2, D. C.

Not too much is happening here. The president comes and goes and we can usually see his return because we work so very near the White House.

Spring is coming to Washington in all its glory. That is the one season I enjoy the best. But here it is rather rainy and that part I don't like.

I do have work to do, so for this time I shall close again hoping that you are all well and sending my best regards to all of you. Thanking you again for the paper.

Sincerely,

Irene Johnston
